Will My Child Actually Wear These Glasses?

Will My Child Actually Wear These Glasses? by Katheryn Dabbs Schramm, is written for every parent whose child has been prescribed eye glasses. Because even the best fitting frames with the most accurate prescription lenses are of no value if they are not worn.

About the Book

This book was written to help parents whose child has been prescribed corrective eyewear, taking them from diagnosis to total compliance. Ms. Schramm uses stories of parent's struggles and achievements to reinforce her underlying message—the critical importance of children receiving professional eyecare and wearing glasses when prescribed.

In Will My Child Actually Wear These Glasses? Katheryn explains optical terms and techniques in a straight-forward, easily understood manner. She offers advice on frame and lens selection and details the technique of "Persuasion" used to teach any aged child, regardless of mental or physical limitation, to successfully wear glasses. Infants, toddlers, children with Down syndrome or Facial Difference, those who are hearing impaired, even rambunctious two-year olds, all can be taught to wear glasses successfully using these time-tested methods.

This is the most complete and useful text published on children's eyewear and it is the first to be written for the parent. After reading Will My Child Actually Wear These Glasses? parents will answer this question with a resounding, "Yes!" The book sells for $19.95 and is available from Amazon.com and Createspace.com/900001120.
